

We've got the builders in...

Bulletin 2 - December 2017

Although not obvious from the outside, a lot of work has been taking place inside the Museum:

- * the new ramps and raised floor through the Magazine down into the main exhibition area have been completed and just await the final covering.
- * an opening has been cut in the floor at the entrance level and a steel plate fitted at the lower level for the lift.
- * the re-painting of parts of the entrance and lower areas of the Museum.

The new year should see:

- * the installation of the foundation block for the new ramped footbridge across the moat.
- * the re-pointing of part of the moat wall to provide additional strengthening for the new entrance across the footbridge.
- * completion of the internal works.

To be followed by the installation of the lift and the new footbridge in time for an Easter re-opening.